

U.S. Government Docket No. OP–1670 Exposes New Fed Power to Seize Control of U.S. Bank Accounts

To protect your savings, take these four steps by May 2023.

If you use a checking account connected to the U.S. banking system, you could soon be at risk for surveillance of all your transactions, or worse ...Direct control of your money by unelected officials in the U.S. government.

It's all because of the U.S. government's horrifying new program that gives unelected officials the power to closely monitor or even freeze your account based on your behavior, and potentially even based on your political views.

It starts with this 93-page government document.

Its name: Docket No. OP — 1670.

This innocent-sounding document, which was never meant for the general public, gives them the power to suspend your ability to pay others or get paid, even punish you with fees and fines, and ultimately ...

Seize control over your money.

Some of the largest U.S. banks are already joining our central bank, the Federal Reserve, to roll this out as rapidly as possible.

There's a good chance your bank is already participating.

There's no stopping this from happening.

The Federal Reserve has set a date for when banks will begin handing over this control. It could start as soon as May 2023.

Fast forward to a future date and picture this:

You see a post on Facebook criticizing politicians for out-of-control inflation. You hit the "Like" button.

An hour later, you read a post by a blogger you follow, asking for donations.

You decide to give him $30 using PayPal.

When you click the button to send, a strange error message pops up. You figure the charity just didn't set up their page properly. So, you move on and you don't think anything of it.

But the next morning, when you log in to your bank account, you see this:

What the heck ...!

You take fast, shallow breaths and your heart starts thumping quicker as you realize what's going to happen.

Your electric bill is still due in a few days.

Your mortgage payment is set to draft from your account in a week.

And you had planned to use your credit or debit card to buy holiday gifts for your grandkids.

But now with your account frozen ...

You're helpless.

As your forehead breaks out in sweat, you call the number flashing on your bank account screen. Nobody picks up.

Instead, you get an automated menu that asks for your Social Security number and other sensitive information.

You never get to speak to a live person. A robotic voice makes you choose a date for a hearing to get your banking reinstated. The soonest appointment is over a month away.

After you hang up, the screen of your frozen bank account still stares at you.

How could this have happened?

You think back to what you've posted on social media. You remember the charities you've given to. The causes you've supported. You remember that the news has reported more and more men and women are getting "cancelled" by their financial institutions.

Why?

Did they buy too much gas? Did they donate money to the "wrong" candidate?

No one seems to know for sure.

But somehow, whenever you thought about protecting your savings from their control, you just shrugged your shoulders and figured you'd "get around to it."

Now that your account's frozen and it's not coming back for weeks, you start to wonder:

What's going to happen next?

Will the electric company send out a warning notice?

Or maybe they'll just shut your power off.

And what about your mortgage?

How long before you start getting warnings about THAT?

How are you going to explain to your spouse that you need to stop all spending from your checking account?

You can't write checks. You can't pay off credit cards.

And what about your Social Security deposits?

Will you still get your Social Security?

This might sound like a nightmare straight out of a dystopian novel, but ...

the Federal Reserve's Docket No. OP — 1670 shows how that would work.

The document maps out how a small group of unelected government officials will soon gain access to all your financial transactions.

And we know, from years of experience, that government ACCESS to all your data is just one step away from the government's power to CONTROL everything that data tells them about who you are and what you do.

They'd have the power to watch how you invest your money, and ...

Restrict the amount you invest in companies that are not "compliant" with environmental, social and governance standards.

They'd have the power to limit your purchases of fossil fuels, including gas at the pump.

They'd have the power to restrict your contributions to certain causes or political parties.

They'd have the power to pressure folks of all ages to get government-mandated vaccinations.

The name of this program is Fed Now

Separately, the Fed has been quietly building its own program. And now, over 121 financial institutions have joined the first phase of Fed Control, including:

- Capital One Financial
- Fidelity Securities
- First Bank
- Goldman Sachs
- JPMorgan Chase
- U.S. Bank

- Wells Fargo
- And many more.

If you have a checking account with any of the banks you see on your screen

But these 121 banks are merely part of the first phase. Soon thereafter, this program will roll out to virtually all U.S. banks, credit unions, and savings & loans.

Fed Control is launching as soon as May 2023. And if this program is designed as reports indicate ...

You cannot “opt out.”

You cannot simply switch banks.

The Federal Reserve will be the central engine in charge of all payment systems, with the power to control how you spend and receive money.

Two hundred and six bank accounts were frozen in early 2022.

The bank accounts of thousands of protesters were frozen, and they were locked out of their money!

Where?

It all happened in Canada, when the government ordered the mass freeze to break the backs of protesting Canadian truckers, trying to do their job and provide for their families.

Canada used the 1988 Emergencies Act — for the first time ever — to freeze the finances of these men and women.

Even people who merely donated to their cause, reported their accounts were frozen, too. This wasn't just Canada, either.

United States citizens who donated to the cause were subject to the same order.
